Four evenings of experience-based teachings relating to points of transition in Indigenous girls and women's lives.

Discussions will include:

- * Changes that have occurred in local Interior Salish Cultures since first contact with explorers, settlers and churches.
- * The colonization process will be discussed including the Indian Act, Residential Schools and how that experience has impacted how Indigenous people interact with our neighbours today.
- * Healing, respect and understanding of different cultures will take place during these interactive sessions and how other Indigenous women and allies have experienced personal transformation and empowerment.
